On 1/18/66, Lieutenant [redacted] of the MSTS said that MSTS would greatly appreciate it if Bureau representatives could again be sent to speak on communism and Bureau jurisdiction before a group of Naval Reserve officers who will convene for training at Washington, D. C., on 1/31/66. [redacted] said he would like to schedule the lecture on FBI jurisdiction for 2:15 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. on 2/4/66, and the lecture on communism for 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on 2/7/66. These talks are to be given in Room 1121, 3800 Newark Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. The Bureau representatives should report first to Room 1220 in that building.

Following initial approval by the Director in July, 1960, we have been assisting the Navy by providing such lectures about four times yearly.

As a result of discussions with the Research-Satellite Section, Domestic Intelligence Division, and with the Training Division, it is anticipated that SA Joseph M. Sizoo will give the talk on communism and SA Richard E. Kohler will give the talk on Bureau jurisdiction. Lieutenant Bausch has assured that all persons in attendance at these lectures will be cleared for "Secret" information.

ACTION:

If approved, Liaison will advise MSTS that Special Agents Sizoo and Kohler will deliver the lectures requested at the times specified.

Commander [] advised that he has been charged with the responsibility of obtaining a speaker to address the Naval Station Officers' Luncheon, a monthly affair, to be held at the Officers' Open Mess, Washington Navy Yard on March 30, 1966. He said although this invitation is given with relatively short notice, he would appreciate it if Mr. Hoover would consider addressing this luncheon. He indicated approximately 200 Naval officers and civilians in the Washington area attend these monthly luncheons and he would leave the choice of a topic to Mr. Hoover's discretion.

Commander [] was informed that, unfortunately, Mr. Hoover's schedule of official commitments and the burden of his duties make it impossible for him to accept this invitation. The Commander said he understood, but that he would like, at some future time, to have Mr. Hoover appear and that he would extend the invitation sufficiently in advance as to increase the possibility that Mr. Hoover would be able to accept. He was informed that every consideration would be given to any invitation he might extend.

MEMORANDUM for Mr. J. Edgar HOOVER, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

Subj: Support rendered this office by FBI personnel

1. The Office of Naval Intelligence is currently conducting a basic training course for new agents. A most important part of this training consists of familiarizing these men, not only with current CP, USA activities and objectives, but also with the activities of the more influential "peace" groups and how their purposes aid and support those of the CP, USA.

2. On 18 February 1966 Special Agents [redacted] and Joseph M. FITZGERALD made available to this office a documentary film entitled "While Brave Men Die." This film, which clearly depicts the character of such groups as the Vietnam Day Committee, the Students for a Democratic Society, the War Resisters League and the other so-called "anti-war" groups, proved an excellent method of demonstrating to these new agents the damaging effect such activities have on the American way of life and morale of the people who are sworn to defend it.

3. Messrs. [redacted] and FITZGERALD's interest and initiative in bringing this film to our attention and making it available as part of our agent training program is very much appreciated. It is most gratifying to note the excellent cooperation and support FBI personnel have rendered this office during the time I have served as its head, and I look forward to the continuance of such a satisfying relationship in the future.

Since initial approval by the Director in July, 1960, we have been assisting the Navy by providing such lectures about four times yearly. As a result of discussions with the Research-Satellite Section, Domestic Intelligence Division, and with the Training Division, it is contemplated that SA Richard E. Kohler will give the talk on Bureau jurisdiction and SA Joseph M. Sizoo will give the talk on communism. Both have given such lectures to similar groups at MSTS in the past. Lieutenant [redacted] has assured that all persons in attendance at these lectures will have clearance for "Secret" information.

Navy
The Naval Investigative Service has recently become the new name of those elements of the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) charged with world-wide investigative and counter-intelligence responsibilities of the Department of the Navy. According to Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor, Director of Naval Intelligence, the new name resulted from a reorganization, ordered by the Navy Secretary for the primary purpose of placing the Director in full control of personnel in the field and removing them from control of the Commandants of Naval Districts in the U. S. and Naval Commanders in overseas areas. In addition, field personnel will now report directly to the Director of Naval Intelligence through the Naval Investigative Service Headquarters at Washington.

The order of the Navy Secretary establishing the Naval Investigative Service abolished all District Intelligence Offices in the U. S. They have been reconstituted as Naval Investigative Service Offices, each headed by the former District Intelligence Officer, now called Commanding Officer. Overseas elements, which formerly operated under the name Naval Counter-intelligence Support Activity, have been similarly reconstituted.

Naval Investigative Service Headquarters and Naval Investigative Service Offices are in the process of obtaining stationery which will display the seal of ONI. In addition, the name "Office of Naval Intelligence" will appear on the door of each office above the name "Naval Investigative Service."

OBSERVATIONS:

This internal change does not affect our relationship with ONI in the field or at the Seat of Government. No changes in our manuals, or in the manner of addressing communications are necessary. While it is expected our domestic and foreign offices will quickly become aware of the new name of this ONI component through their local liaison, it is felt that, in the interest of uniformity, notice should be given to the field in an SAC Letter.

COMMUNISM IN THE UNITED STATES

By

Chief Inspector W. C. Sullivan

The State University of New York

June 30, 1960

ENCLOSURE

In considering communism's threat to the free world, the minds of most Americans focus in an almost reflex action on such points as Berlin, Formosa, Moscow, and Washington. Yet, in the struggle against communism, the front is--literally--everywhere. This is so because the issue between communism and freedom is, in essence, the struggle for the minds and loyalties of men everywhere.

We don't have to be in Berlin, Formosa, or any of the other points of international tension to experience communist pressure. Right here at Alfred, New York--not much more than a month ago--Vladimir Trifonov, an official of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D. C., appeared before a student group. In our country, he had the right and privilege to do so. We would not have it otherwise, for this is one of the fundamental individual rights--freedom of speech--which distinguish us from the communists.

However, as the communists frequently do, he abused this right by distorting the facts. According to newspaper accounts which I have read, he categorically denied that communists interfere in the affairs of other nations or engage in espionage activity.

Historical Rebuttal

Any denial that the Soviet Union interferes in the affairs of other nations is, of course, belied by history. The communist goal of world domination could not be achieved without such interference. Moreover, the organizational form which the world-wide communist movement has assumed is, in itself, incontrovertible evidence of this fact. Under the doctrinal aegis of "the class struggle," the Soviet Union, by its direction and manipulation of the communist parties throughout the world, is, as a matter of basic, deliberate policy, continuously interfering in the political, economic, and social lives of noncommunist nations. At the same time, no government in history has placed more emphasis on espionage than the Soviet Union. To accelerate the fulfillment of the communist prophecy of the inevitable triumph of socialism over capitalism, the Soviet Union has organized the largest espionage and intelligence operations in history and maintains an unparalleled network of agents throughout the world.

Underlying communist ideology is the concept of the unity of theory and practice. According to communism, there is no such thing as knowledge for its own sake. For the communists, all knowledge must necessarily be translated into some form of action. And, under the communist concept of morality, such activities as interfering in the internal life of other nations and conducting espionage against them--as well as any other tactics which advance the cause of communism--are "morally" justified. These points are manifest from the activities which the Soviet Union has directed and is directing against the nations of our hemisphere.

In 1959, the Soviet Union had diplomatic missions in only three of the Latin-American nations. Yet, last year, two of these three nations--Mexico and Argentina--expelled Soviet diplomats attached to these missions for instigating strikes and street riots in collusion with local communists. The report of the Royal Commission appointed by the Canadian Government to investigate the charges made by Igor Gouzenko, the code clerk who defected from the Soviet Embassy in Ottawa, Canada, in 1945, stated that during World War II, when the Soviet Union was ostensibly an ally of Canada, espionage operations against Canada were carried on by staff members of the Soviet Embassy under direct instructions from Moscow.

The Tinder

Our own experience with Soviet interference in the internal affairs of the United States is well documented by the history of the Communist Party, USA, which has acted, in effect, as an agent of Soviet power. The roots of the communist movement in our Nation predate, of course, the Party's role as a completely subservient instrument of Soviet policy. These roots go back to the middle of the 19th century when the first Marxian socialists arrived in the United States from Germany after the unsuccessful revolution there in 1848. Subsequent waves of European immigrants during the 1870's and 1880's brought with them the socialist views not only of Karl Marx but also of his contemporaries Ferdinand Lassalle and Michael Bakunin.

During this same period, a native American radicalism was developing. The social, economic, and political ferment of the times gave rise to various expressions of protest including agrarian reform, Populism, and experiments in utopian communities. The confluence of these imported and domestic radical currents led eventually to the formation of the early American socialist groups, one or another of which attracted a wide variety of rebels and reformers. The polyglot character of early American socialism generated, inevitably, internecine disputes, which, at times, reached almost fratricidal proportions, as leaders like Eugene Debs, Daniel DeLeon, and "Big Bill" Haywood endeavored to mould the embryonic socialist movement in accordance with their own views.

This, then, was the milieu out of which the Communist Party would draw its founders. But, whatever the socialist movement was at the end of World War I, it was not the highly organized, tightly disciplined, ideologically cohesive party of professional revolutionaries which V. I. Lenin had envisioned as the vanguard of the working class and as the general staff of the revolution.

The Spark

The one event which sparked the formation of the militant, revolutionary group prescribed by Lenin was the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917, through which the communists overthrew a liberal government and seized state power. The success of the Bolshevik Revolution intensified the ferment within the Socialist Party, and its more militant members, inspired by the Russian example, planned, in true conspiratorial fashion, to capture the Socialist Party in order to transform it into an organization modelled on the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Born in Strife

When the Socialist Party held an emergency national convention in Chicago in August, 1919, the right-wing element prevented the left-wing element from entering the convention hall. This action was tantamount to expulsion, and the left-wing element, many of which were native Americans, held a meeting of its own at which, on September 1, 1919, it founded the Communist Labor Party. Concurrently, the predominantly foreign-born members of the left-wing element held another convention in Chicago and founded the Communist Party of America. The two communist parties continued in existence until May, 1921, when they merged, at the insistence of the Communist International (Comintern), which would recognize only one party in any country.

The Comintern had been organized in Moscow in 1919 to insure the discipline of the international communist movement. As part of the requirements for membership in the Comintern, the newly united Communist Party of America agreed that it would support the Soviet Union rather than the United States in the event of a war between the two nations; that it would be bound by all decisions of the Comintern; and that it would maintain both a "legal" or aboveground organization and an "illegal" or underground apparatus.

Nourished by Conspiracy

The communist movement launched itself in the United States by openly proclaiming its revolutionary goals. Shortly after its organization, the Party's open defiance of our laws caused the Federal Government to arrest and deport a number of foreign-born communist leaders and members. Confronted with this legal action by Government authorities, the Party operated largely underground until it began to emerge in 1923. This process was finally completed in 1925 when the Party, although still retaining its underground apparatus, was again conducting most of its activities openly. This early period of underground activity illustrates a principle and a practice to which the Party adheres even today. An underground apparatus is always maintained to insure that the Party will be able to continue operation under any and all conditions. The Party's underground apparatus expands and contracts as, in the opinion of its leaders, the situation demands.

The first decade of the Party's history--from 1919 to 1929--can best be characterized as a period of birth pangs and growing pains. In addition to the normal organizational problems of any newly formed group, the Party was beset by internal factionalism as various individuals competed for the Soviet favor which would insure their appointment to the leading posts in the Party. This factionalism continued until 1929 when no less an authority than Joseph Stalin himself ordained that Earl Browder and William Z. Foster, whose obedience could be depended upon, would head the communist movement in the United States.

Despite the Government's legal action and the internal factionalism, the Party had grown. During the first 10 years of its existence, the Party was able to cite a number of accomplishments. On Comintern instructions and with Soviet financial assistance, the Party began publishing its daily newspaper in 1924. Party leaders made frequent pilgrimages to Moscow. The Party participated in a number of strikes; it began its attempts to infiltrate the American labor movement by "boring from within"; and it gave propaganda support to Moscow's efforts for United States diplomatic recognition. The heat of such internal and external conflicts moulded the Party, during its formative years, into the rigid, intolerant, dogmatic, monolithic form which still characterizes it today.

Steeled in the Struggle

The 1930's dawned with millions unemployed as a result of the economic depression. In line with Comintern instructions that this was a typical cyclical crisis of the type inherent under capitalism which should be exploited, the Party attempted to intensify the prevalent economic and social unrest. Strikes, hunger marches, and other unemployment demonstrations were instigated by the Party in order to foment additional strife and to spread communism. By the mid-1930's, out of the experience gained from these militant tactics, Party members were steeled, and the Party itself developed into an even more closely knit, rigidly disciplined, tightly organized, and highly flexible group.

The Popular Front

In 1935, the Soviet Union, realizing the potential threat to its own existence from the rise of fascism in Europe, instructed the international communist movement to adopt a united front against fascism. Following these instructions, the Party here discontinued its open advocacy of the revolutionary overthrow of the Government and, instead, appealed to noncommunists to put aside their differences with the communists and to join in a common effort aimed at the defeat of fascism. Adopting the Trojan-horse technique, the Communist Party, USA, attempted to advance by subtle and devious tactics, rather than by open and direct militancy.

By ostensibly abandoning its revolutionary program and by concentrating on the legitimate issue of the threat of fascism, the Party acquired an air of apparent respectability and successfully masqueraded as a normal political organization. By the end of the 1930's, the Party had successfully infiltrated into the mainstreams of American life. Communist views were given even greater impact and appeal by the proliferation of the numerous front groups which the Party had organized or captured and then manipulated for its own purposes. Many prominent Americans in all walks of life were duped, not only into supporting communist causes, but also--and this is often overlooked--into stifling anticommunist views. Despite its nonrevolutionary facade, the Party had not forsaken its violent revolutionary role--it sent some 1,500 of its members to fight in the Spanish Civil War--to fight not in the interests of democracy but in the interests of world communism.

Totalitarian Twins

Party tactics changed abruptly again in 1939--once more as the consequence of a development affecting the Soviet Union. I refer, of course, to the signing of the infamous Nazi-Soviet nonaggression pact. With the Soviet Union now allied with its former enemy, Nazi Germany, the Party, overnight, dropped its militant fight against fascism. Shortly thereafter, when World War II broke out in Europe, the Party, ever mindful of its obligation to defend the Soviet Union, labeled it an "imperialist war" in which the United States had no legitimate interest. In behalf of the Soviet Union, the Party instigated or supported strikes in our basic industries to disrupt our national defense efforts and our aid to the democratic nations of Western Europe fighting the Nazis and Fascists.

At an emergency convention held in November, 1940, the Party withdrew from the Comintern. This however, was just a tactical maneuver--even the Party admitted this--designed to thwart the legal provisions of the Voorhis Act, which had been enacted by Congress that year. In brief, this law provided that any organization in the United States which engaged in political activity and which was subject to foreign control would be required to register with the Attorney General. In the statement which announced its disaffiliation, the Party made it explicitly clear that it still supported the aims and programs of the Comintern.

Double Reverse

The war which the Party originally described as "imperialist" was soon transformed, through the magic of communist jargon, into a "just" war by another foreign development. This was the invasion of the Soviet Union by Hitler's Wehrmacht in June, 1941. The new character of the war--now that the very existence of the Soviet Union was threatened--triggered another major reversal in the tactics of the Communist Party, USA. Almost immediately, the Party began agitating for the United States to enter the war. After Pearl Harbor, the communists became "superpatriots." Abandoning their instigation of strikes against our war efforts, they advocated that the labor movement adopt a "no strike" pledge for the duration of the war. In true totalitarian fashion, they subordinated every consideration--even such fundamental ones as human dignity, justice, and civil liberties--in order to promote national unity. However, the Party's objective was not so much to promote the war effort of the United States as it was to insure the preservation of the Soviet Union at all costs.

Heresy Excoriated

The Soviet Union had to intervene in the fortunes of the Communist Party, USA, again in 1945. Apparently misinterpreting Soviet instructions relating to the dissolution of the Comintern in 1943, Earl Browder, then the Party's General Secretary, had reorganized the Party, in 1944, into a political-action group known as the Communist Political Association. However, the Soviet Union soon corrected this. When the defeat of the fascist nations was imminent early in 1945 and the Soviet Union no longer desperately needed the allied support which had prompted its temporary wartime cooperation with the West, it ordered the reconstitution of the Communist Party, USA, as a militant Marxist-Leninist organization in preparation for a return to the traditional communist revolutionary activity based on the international class struggle.

The reconstitution of the Party in the United States was ordered by Moscow through the French communist leader Jacques Duclos. In April, 1945, Duclos wrote an article criticizing Browder's interpretations, castigating the Communist Political Association as a violation of Marxist-Leninist principles, and urging American communists to reorganize the Party as a revolutionary group. Abjectly capitulating to this ultimatum, the leaders of the Communist Political Association outdid one another in confessing their errors and, in July, 1945, reconstituted the Communist Party, USA. Browder was later charged with revisionism and was expelled from the Party. With Moscow's blessing, William Z. Foster assumed the leadership of the American communist movement.

The Two Camps

The deterioration in international relations, presaged by Browder's ouster, was signalled by Stalin in 1946 when he declared the cold war by announcing that the temporary Soviet wartime alliance with the Western democracies had been based on tactical expediency and was not to be interpreted as the foundation for extended postwar, international cooperation. In the following year, Stalin's pronouncement was given practical political expression by A. A. Zhdanov when, at the founding conference of the Cominform,* he divided the world into the "imperialist camp" headed by the United States and the "anti-imperialist camp" under the leadership of the Soviet Union.

The Communist Party, USA, in line with these instructions, has made every effort to obstruct all measures which our Nation has taken to defend itself and to strengthen our allies against the threat of further communist expansion. These measures which the Party has opposed include the Marshall Plan, aid to Greece and Turkey, the Point Four Program, the United Nations intervention in Korea, and the military, economic, and political agreements which we have made with other noncommunist nations throughout the world. At the same time, the Party has defended such aggressive communist actions as the take-over in China and the European satellite nations, and the brutal suppressions of the uprisings in East Germany, Hungary, and Tibet.

Return to the Underground

In 1948, the leaders of the Communist Party, USA, were once again brought before the bar of justice. A Federal grand jury in New York City returned an indictment against the 12 members of the Party's national board under conspiracy provisions of the Smith Act. In brief, the Smith Act prohibits the teaching or advocacy of overthrowing the United States Government by force or violence. The case of William Z. Foster, was later severed because of his illness. The remaining defendants were convicted in October, 1949, and their convictions were later sustained by appellate review to the Supreme Court.

When the Smith Act indictments against Party leaders were returned in 1948, the Party, true to its conspiratorial nature, began extensive preparation to expand its underground apparatus. When their convictions were sustained by the Supreme Court in 1951, the Party's careful planning enabled it to switch immediately to a primarily underground operation. During this period of underground activity, Party leaders disappeared from their homes, jobs, and communities. In some cases, they altered their physical appearances. Clandestine communications networks were used. Underground printing facilities were activated. Prearranged financing arrangements were put into effect. The most stringent security precautions were observed, and those who remained in the open Party organization were placed at the complete disposal of the underground apparatus.

The Party continued in an expanded underground status until late 1955, when Party leaders decided that, because the political climate had improved, they could again conduct the major portion of their activities openly. Most Party leaders who had been underground moved back into the open apparatus. At the same time, those Party leaders who had been imprisoned for violating the Smith Act had completed their sentences and were again returning to Party activity. By early 1956, the Party had adopted a view of guarded optimism toward the future.

Factionalism Erupts

This optimism proved somewhat premature because, in the subsequent discussion of the Party's policies and tactics during the postwar decade, a factional dispute arose. The left-wing faction, led by William Z. Foster, the Party's current chairman emeritus, called for the continuation of the Party as a strong Marxist-Leninist group which would retain its close ties with the Soviet Union. The center group, led by the present national chairman, Eugene Dennis, advocated a modified Marxist-Leninist organization designed to cloak the Party in a new look. The right-wing faction, led by John Gates, Daily Worker editor, openly called for the transformation of the Party into a political-action group which could appear to act independently of the Soviet Union.

The factional dispute was exacerbated by the denigration of Stalin, evidences of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union, and the Soviet suppression of the Hungarian uprising. As a result, the frankest discussion in the Party's entire history took place as rank-and-file members subjected the Party, its policies, and its leaders to extensive criticism--much of it public.

Orthodoxy Triumphs

Realizing the danger to its continued control of the Party if the right-wing view prevailed, the Soviet Union intervened in this factional dispute and exerted its influence in favor of the left-wing faction in various ways. The authoritative Soviet publication Pravda hailed William Z. Foster as a "noted theoretician and Marxist historian." As he had in 1945, Jacques Duclos warned the Communist Party, USA, against any revisionist tendencies. When the proposal to transform the Party into a political-action organization was soundly defeated at the Party's 16th National Convention in February, 1957, Pravda applauded the defeat of what it derided as the "reactionary forces" who had supported that position. Later in 1957, Kommunist, a leading Soviet theoretical journal, published an article criticizing John Gates' views and another article by Foster in which he defended his position in the factional struggle. When Gates finally resigned from the Party in January of 1958, the victory of the left-wing, pro-Soviet faction became a foregone conclusion.

Momentous Year

Two events during 1959 were milestones in the Party's history. The first of these was the visit of Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev to the United States, and the second was the Party's 17th National Convention. The Party claimed that Khrushchev's visit gave a tremendous boost to the Party's morale by revitalizing the confidence of Party leaders and members in themselves and in the ultimate victory of communism in the United States. In December, 1959, shortly after his visit, the Party held its 17th National Convention. The most significant achievement of this convention was the reconciliation of the factional dispute, thereby welding the Party into a more solidly unified, militant organization under the leadership of its present general secretary, Moscow-trained Gus Hall.

Hall's vigorous leadership has sparked a resurgence in all phases of Party activity--membership recruiting, promoting the circulation of Party publications, expanding the Party's internal educational program, and, of extreme importance, laying the groundwork for the formation of a new nationwide Marxist youth organization.

Subversive Staff

At the convention, a new national committee of 60 members was elected. One member has since died and has not yet been replaced. According to the Party's constitution, the national committee is the highest authority in the Party between conventions and makes decisions on the major issues which arise between national conventions. Present plans call for two meetings of the national committee each year. In March of this year, the members of the national committee elected an 18-member national executive committee, theoretically to direct Party affairs between meetings of the national committee. Actually, the present guiding body in the Party is a five-member secretariat consisting of:

Gus Hall	- General Secretary
Eugene Dennis	- National Chairman
Benjamin J. Davis	- National Secretary
James Jackson	- Editor of The Worker *
Hyman Lumer	- National Education Secretary

False Facade

As a minority group seeking total power in our Nation, the Party has always recognized that it is largely dependent on the support and assistance of noncommunists for the achievement of its aims and objectives. For this reason, the Party has made extensive use of communist front groups as auxiliary bodies and "transmission belts" to enable it to extend its power and influence beyond the limits of its own membership.

*Jackson also serves as National Secretary for the South.

Front groups are created by the communists on their own initiative, through a coalition with noncommunist groups, or by infiltrating and gaining control of a legitimate noncommunist group. They are organized as the specific need arises in various phases of the Party's endeavors, and are discarded when they have outlived their usefulness to the Party. Most of them are given innocuous or patriotic-sounding names, and they stand for seemingly orthodox and legitimate programs in order to conceal their real communist character.

Financing the Revolution

It is obvious that an organization such as the Party requires sizable funds with which to operate. The Party raises the funds necessary for its operations from many and diverse sources, including:

1. The dues paid by all members
2. Special fund-raising drives
3. Special assessments on the members
4. Sustainers--regular contributions over and above dues payments made by certain Party members
5. Public meetings and other affairs
6. Party "angels" (Wealthy contributors)
7. Donations from Party sympathizers
8. Bequests
9. Business enterprises
10. Investments
11. Communist front groups
12. ~~Miscellaneous social activities, e.g., bazaars, picnics, raffles, et cetera~~

Unending Indoctrination

Because it is based on an alien ideology, the Party must maintain an extensive educational apparatus to insure the doctrinal purity of the individual member. In addition to the formal school which it controls--the Faculty of Social Science in New York City--each Party district continually conducts educational classes for the membership. Party education is regarded by the communists as of such paramount importance that, even during the recent period of enlarged underground activity, clandestine educational classes were held. Moreover, all Party literature has, as one of its primary functions, the education of the entire Party membership in the principles of Marxism-Leninism.

Party Voices

The communist press is a vital part of communist activity. In the United States, the principal Party propaganda organs at the present time are: The Worker, a weekly newspaper published in New York City; People's World, another weekly newspaper published in San Francisco; Political Affairs, a monthly theoretical magazine; and Mainstream, a Marxist cultural monthly magazine. It is the duty of all Party members to promote the circulation of all communist newspapers, periodicals, and pamphlets. For the communists, the press has vital functions which transcend the mere reporting of events. One of its chief functions is to agitate and to create discontent against our social order. Another role played by the communist press is that of a collective organizer, mobilizing the Party members for strikes and other protest demonstrations. The press also functions importantly in the recruitment of new members into the Party. Moreover, it affords political guidance to each Party member by spelling out the Party's position--or as it is frequently described, the Party line--on all current issues of international and national interest.

The Current Line

Currently, the Party is stressing such domestic issues as the struggle for equal rights for Negroes; the abolition of all internal security programs and of congressional committees investigating communism; and the reduction of military spending and the diversion of such appropriations to a broad program of social welfare projects. In short, the Party is attempting to exploit what it describes as the "built-in" problems of our modern, complex, industrial society, claiming--at the same time--that these problems can be resolved only under socialism.

On the international level, the Party is dutifully echoing Soviet propaganda regarding peaceful coexistence and peaceful competition, disarmament, an end to the testing of nuclear weapons, and increased East-West trade. In every phase of its propaganda on international relations, the Party line has been that all Soviet actions reveal a desire for a detente in international relations, while American foreign policy is designed to incite world tensions.

Foreign Allegiance

Only one conclusion is possible from any objective review of the history of the Communist Party, USA. The Party owes allegiance only to the Soviet Union and has served directly and willingly as an adjunct of Soviet policy. Since 1919 when it was organized, the Communist Party has formulated its policies and altered its tactics either on the basis of specific Soviet instructions or as the result of an almost Pavlovian conditioned response in defense of the Soviet Union--the Party's only raison d'etre.

Allowing for specific national differences, the history of the Communist Party, USA, mirrors the history of the Communist Party of Canada and the communist parties in Latin America. The records of all communist parties in this hemisphere disclose an unmistakable pattern of complete subservience to the international communist movement headed by the Soviet Union.

During the 1920's, the other communist parties in the Western Hemisphere also joined the Comintern and were subject to its disciplinary powers. Like the Communist Party, USA, the selection of their leadership in the late 1920's was influenced by the struggle for power in the Soviet Union. Again, during the 1930's, the communist parties in the Western Hemisphere adopted ultraleft programs comparable to that of the Communist Party, USA, and in 1935, they too abandoned these tactics in favor of the popular front against fascism.

Their gyrations during the period of the Nazi-Soviet nonaggression pact and after the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union paralleled those of the Communist Party in our country. In some nations of the Western Hemisphere, the communist parties also changed their names during World War II to promote greater unity in support of the war effort. After World War II, the other Western Hemisphere communist parties also kept in step with Stalin's declaration of the cold war by turning violently against the United States.

Throughout the history of communism in Latin America, "anti-imperialism" has been one of the major issues exploited by communist propaganda. Prior to World War II, both the United States and Great Britain were attacked on this issue. Since the war, however, this theme has been directed almost exclusively against the United States.

In conducting their campaign against "Yanqui imperialism," the Latin-American communists pose as nationalists who are fighting for the interests of their own countries. Since so many Latin-American nations have now reached the stages of economic and political development which, historically, have given rise to extreme nationalistic consciousness, the communists have little difficulty in exploiting this issue in order to promote Soviet objectives by intensifying anti-United States sentiments.

In the guise of nationalists, the communists vociferously oppose all our foreign investments in Latin America and any development of Latin America's natural resources by United States capital as imperialist exploitation. At the same time, Latin-American communists are vigorously supporting the efforts of the Soviet Union to further its economic, cultural, and political penetration of the Western Hemisphere.

In the Western Hemisphere, there are at present approximately 225,000 dedicated communists--not to mention the countless additional fellow travelers, sympathizers, and dupes. Through these adherents, as through its followers elsewhere in the world, the Soviet Union can and regularly does--contrary to Trifonov's denial--interfere in the affairs of other nations.

Espionage as Policy

The history of the international communist movement proves conclusively that the subversion of noncommunist nations through the instrumentalities of the various communist parties is official Soviet policy. In addition, the extensive espionage activities directed against the free world prove that espionage is also a calculated policy of the Soviet State-- another fact which Trifonov also denied. Spying is such an integral part of the domestic life of the Soviet Union that its extension into Soviet foreign relations is an almost natural development.

The present Committee of State Security (KGB), the civilian Soviet intelligence agency, is a direct descendant of the Cheka (Extraordinary Commission to Fight Counterrevolution and Sabotage), which was organized immediately after the Bolshevik Revolution. The KGB controls an army of informants within the Soviet Union who furnish the information with which it represses the Soviet populace. Abroad, the KGB directs an international apparatus which carries on espionage, sabotage, and terrorism throughout the free world. The activities of the KGB in noncommunist nations are supplemented by those of the Chief Intelligence Directorate of the General Staff (GRU), which directs Soviet military intelligence. Significantly, all Soviet espionage activity is under the ultimate supervision of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

Illegal Espionage

During recent years, we in the FBI have noticed a sharp increase in Soviet illegal espionage. This type of espionage is directed by individuals who have no overt connection with their Soviet principals and who are sent to the United States under false identities supported by fraudulent documents. This covert, illegal activity is only one phase of the Soviet espionage offensive. The other, usually described as "legal," is conducted and controlled through official personnel legally assigned to Soviet establishments in the United States.

The Abel case is a good, composite example of a typical Soviet illegal espionage operation. This case actually began in July, 1947, when a United States passport was issued to one [redacted] a naturalized American citizen of Lithuanian extraction. Two months later, [redacted] departed from the United States to visit relatives behind the Iron Curtain. He never returned.

In his place came a Soviet espionage agent. Landing in Canada, he crossed the border into the United States with [redacted] passport, which he immediately destroyed. He next secured the birth certificate for one Emil Goldfus, who had died in infancy. He secured another birth certificate under the name of Martin Collins, a fictitious person. By now, he had three identities he could use as he saw fit: [redacted] Goldfus, and Collins. To his espionage contacts, he was known only by the code name [redacted] b6 b7C

This Soviet agent set up headquarters in New York City. Ostensibly, he was a commercial photographer with all of the essential tools of his trade. But, he also had three short-wave radios, a tape recorder, a miniature camera, a set of magnets, and a pocketful of hollowed-out items for concealing micro-filmed messages. Among these items were a wooden pencil, a shaving brush, cuff links, batteries, coins, pigment tubes, and an assortment of nuts and bolts. The magnets, we discovered, were for attaching messages to metal fences, the bottoms of park benches, and other similar hiding places.

Twice a week, this spy faithfully tuned in to Russia on one of his three radios and received carefully encoded instructions. Guided by a microfilmed schedule carried in an ordinary wooden pencil which had been cleverly hollowed out to form a secret container, he recorded his instructions and subsequently passed them on to members of the espionage network. When forwarding information to the Soviet Union, he placed his microfilmed data in one of the numerous "dead drops" designated by his Soviet superiors. These messages were eventually picked up and sent to the Soviet Union by other members of his espionage network.

This Soviet spy was Colonel Rudolf Ivanovich Abel, who was arrested in June, 1957, and whose conviction for espionage on behalf of the Soviet Union was upheld by the United States Supreme Court in March of this year. He is now serving a 30-year prison term.

"Legal" Espionage

The so-called "legal" espionage of Soviet officials stationed in our country ranges from the overt collection of readily available public-source information of an intelligence nature to covert attempts to secure classified information.

Quite rightly, our Government has always operated under the principle that, as much information as possible about our country, consistent with national security, should be made available to its citizens. American industry necessarily issues a large volume of technical and scientific publications on manufacturing techniques and industrial processes. Our newspapers and magazines, exercising correctly our traditional freedom of the press, publish, as a matter of course, much information of value to a foreign power with aggressive intentions.

The Soviet representatives have not overlooked the possibilities and opportunities inherent in this situation. They request literally hundreds of publications each year from the Government Printing Office and other Government agencies. They subscribe to countless periodicals. And, they correspond extensively with chambers of commerce, state and municipal information agencies, publishing houses, and industrial facilities. They have shown a marked interest in securing maps and photographs of our towns and cities with their seaports, industrial plants, transportation systems, military establishments, and similar facilities. Soviet diplomats travel extensively throughout the United States to attend conventions, exhibits, and other meetings of scientific and industrial groups, where they collect whatever material is available. In this relentless search for information, money is no object. While the emphasis, naturally, is on scientific, technological, and military data, Soviet diplomats are also alert for any and all information--classified or unclassified--which can be used in Soviet propaganda attacks against our Nation.

Soviet Aerial Reconnaissance

Yet, even the wealth of information readily available in the United States does not satiate the Soviets' appetite, and they regularly resort to covert means to obtain the information they seek. For years, the Soviets had been purchasing commercially available aerial photographs of various localities in the United States. Yet, in May, 1954, [redacted] as assistant Soviet air attache, offered a Washington, D. C. photographer $700 to rent an airplane in order to take photographs of New York City which were not available commercially. [redacted] even specified the scale he desired and the altitude from which the photographs were to be taken. For this flagrant abuse of his diplomatic status, [redacted] was declared persona non grata and left the United States in June, 1954. In spite of [redacted] expulsion, the Soviets have continued their systematic efforts to collect aerial photographs of different areas in the United States. b6 b7C

In January, 1955, our Government restricted Soviet citizens in the United States from acquiring any aerial photographs other than those which appeared in "newspapers, periodicals, technical journals, atlases and books commercially available to the general public." The Soviets immediately began circumventing these restrictions by subverting Americans to purchase aerial photographs for them or by using trickery and deceit to obtain them.

One month after these restrictions became effective, for example, Nikolai I. Trofimov, a Soviet official in Mexico, began negotiations for an American residing on our west coast to get him aerial photographs of 45 major United States cities. Of these 45 cities, 19 are located near Strategic Air Command bases and the remaining 26 are regarded as strategic, because located either in them or near them are air bases, naval bases, research or training stations, atomic energy installations, or important industrial facilities. In two other instances which are typical of their use of subterfuge, Soviet officials, during 1959, obtained aerial photographs from chambers of commerce in Montana and Wyoming by posing as American tourists.

The data which can be developed from aerial photographs is obviously invaluable. However, this information is only one objective of the Soviet Union's insatiable quest for our military, scientific, industrial, and technological secrets. As is the case in their efforts to obtain aerial photographs, Soviet diplomats often go far beyond the acceptable standards of diplomatic behavior in their relentless search for information regarding our Nation. Moreover, in the light of the methods used by the Soviets to obtain aerial photographs of our country, Khrushchev's emotional diatribe against our U-2 aerial reconnaissance flights over the Soviet Union has a particularly hollow and hypocritical ring!

Double Dealing

Khrushchev's visit to the United States last fall provided the backdrop for another Soviet espionage meeting. On September 18, 1959, at the very moment when Khrushchev was outlining his grandiose plan for total disarmament before the United Nations General Assembly, [] a Soviet employee of the United Nations, was in Springfield, Massachusetts, for a clandestine espionage meeting. The purpose of this meeting was to induce an American to furnish information regarding our highly secret cryptographic machines and to persuade the American to secure employment in a sensitive Government agency where he could obtain classified information for transmittal to []. While this espionage meeting was taking place, [] another Soviet employee of the United Nations conducted a surveillance of the meeting place as an additional security precaution.

b7c

The anomaly in this case goes far beyond the contemptuous timing of this clandestine spy meeting. [] and [] as I have mentioned, were both Soviet nationals employed by the United Nations. As such, each had taken a solemn oath to become an international civil servant and, I quote, "not to seek or accept instructions in regard to the performance of my duties from any government or other authority external to the organization."

b6
b7c

The deliberate breach of this solemn oath by these two Soviets is typical of the methods which characterize Soviet espionage. Our investigations disclose that the Soviets show no hesitation in using such tactics as blackmail, extortion, bribery, entrapment, and false promises to ensnare Americans into their espionage and intelligence networks.

World-Wide Ramifications

Nor, again, has the United States been the only target of Soviet espionage. Because of the international character of communism and its goal of world domination, no nation is immune. The scope and scale of the Soviet espionage effort directed against noncommunist nations are obvious from the fact that, during recent years, some 360 individuals in 11 different nations of the free world have been convicted of espionage in behalf of the Soviet Union.

The public record of the expulsion of Soviet diplomatic personnel from the countries of the free world because of their espionage or subversive activities is additional proof that subversion and espionage are, in effect, vital aspects of official Soviet state policy. During the past 10 years, at least 47 Soviet officials have been publicly expelled for espionage and subversion from free world countries and from the United Nations organization. The roster of these nations includes Argentina, Denmark, Iran, Italy, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Thailand, Turkey, the United Kingdom, the United States, and Venezuela.

Soviet espionage is augmented by the spy operations of the other communist-bloc nations. The European satellite intelligence services, for example, have been developed according to the Soviet pattern and are guided by Soviet policies and procedures. The Soviets have access to all information developed by the satellite intelligence services and, in fact, maintain an advisor system at the headquarters level to make certain that satellite espionage operations are consistent with Soviet interests.

This coordination is not limited to headquarters abroad. Beginning in November, 1958, the Soviet and satellite military, naval, and air attaches stationed in the United States began a series of monthly meetings under the guidance of the Soviet military attaché. At the initial meeting, the satellite officials were given specific assignments to obtain information desired by the Soviets, and arrangements were made for the over-all correlation of their activities. Thus, for all practical purposes, Soviet and satellite espionage are one and the same thing.

The extent of the problem posed by communist espionage is indicated by the fact that it has been reliably estimated that, throughout the world, some 300,000 trained officers serve in the 27 intelligence and security services of the communist-bloc nations. Yet, Trifonov had the effrontery to stand before an audience here at Alfred and categorically deny that the Soviet Union engaged in any espionage activity!

Specious Appeal

The magnitude and the effectiveness of the communist espionage and subversive offensives help to explain the almost desperate efforts of the communist movement to disguise its inherently illegal nature under an aura of legitimacy and respectability--the sine qua non for capturing the minds and loyalties of men everywhere. The communists have no intention of abandoning their extensive espionage and subversive networks. But, they realize that they must base their open appeal on what are universally recognized as man's legitimate needs and aspirations. It is for this reason that communism promises all things to all men. It claims to be the panacea which will cure the world's ills. It contends that only under a world-wide communist social order will man be assured of complete equality, material abundance, and social justice.

However, the appeals of communism are as cynical as Trifonov's denials. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has pointed out:

"In the name of ending the exploitation of the common man, the communist hierarchy has developed into a parasitic ruling class which has imposed a ruthless tyranny over millions. In the name of humanity, communism suppresses the most elementary human values and robs the individual of his inherent dignity and worth. In what is pictured as a workers' paradise, slave labor is commonplace and the working man is denied the right to strike. In the regime which claims to have eliminated all discrimination, anti-Semitism is virtually official policy. The pretension that communism stands for national independence is flagrantly contradicted by the brutal suppressions of the uprisings in East Germany, Hungary, and Tibet."

The philosophy of communism is demonstrably false. Communist methods are repugnant to the entire civilized world. Yet, the appeal of the communist promise of a world-wide society in which lasting peace and harmony will prevail proves again the power of a myth.

But, the existence of the communist-bloc nations as a powerful, aggressive force in international relations is no myth. World communism now controls one quarter of the land area of the world and the lives of almost one billion people. It confidently predicts its inevitable triumph on a world-wide scale. Its triumph will mean our total destruction. We ignore this threat at our peril.

The menace of world communism looms large. So large that any response to its challenge which is based on hysteria, alarmism, extremism, or vigilante action will only do more harm than good. The only effective answer lies in a long-range, positive program based on a realistic, rational, analytical appraisal of the threat which the communist movement presents. Only out of such a constructive approach can we develop the course of action which the future demands. This program must not merely counter communism. It must also, and in the very process, deepen and enrich our own heritage of freedom--our mightiest weapon in the struggle for the minds and loyalties of men everywhere.

SAC LETTER 66-119

ST
NAVY
(B) OFFICE OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE - NAVAL INVESTIGATIVE SERVICE -- The Naval Investigative Service recently became the new name of those elements of the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) charged with the world-wide investigative and counterintelligence responsibilities of the Department of the Navy. This resulted from a reorganization, ordered by the Secretary of the Navy, for the primary purpose of placing the Director of Naval Intelligence in full control of personnel in the field and removing them from control of the Commandants of Naval Districts in the United States and Naval commanders in overseas areas. In addition, field personnel will now report directly to the Director of ONI, through the Naval Investigative Service Headquarters at Washington.

All District Intelligence Offices in the United States have been abolished and reconstituted as Naval Investigative Service Offices, each headed by the former District Intelligence Officer, now called Commanding Officer. Overseas elements, which formerly operated under the name Naval Counterintelligence Support Activity, have been similarly reconstituted. The fact that the new component is a subsidiary of ONI will be made plain by the use of the ONI seal on its stationery and the appearance of the name "Office of Naval Intelligence" on the doors of its offices.

It is not anticipated that this internal change will have any effect on our relations with ONI, either at the Seat of Government or in the field; however, you are being advised of it as a matter of information.

Mr. Theodore Fason, who has been in charge of special investigative operations at ONI Headquarters for the past six years, has been transferred and leaves 4/30/66 to become Assistant Supervising Agent at ONI's Naval Investigative Service Office in San Diego, California.

Fason has been in the Navy for many years in both civilian and military capacities. Prior to entering the Navy, Fason served with Secret Service. He holds the rank of Captain in the Naval Reserve. During his tour of service at ONI Headquarters, Fason has been in almost daily contact with Bureau personnel. He has always been most friendly and extremely cooperative in helping us resolve matters of mutual interest in an expeditious and most satisfactory manner. For example, he was of great assistance, several years ago, in identifying an unknown subject as [redacted] Navy enlisted man who later was convicted in a Bureau case for espionage on behalf of the Soviets. Fason has told Bureau Liaison he is looking forward to continuing close contact through our San Diego Office.

Under the circumstances, it is felt appropriate to send a letter to Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor, Director of ONI, expressing appreciation for the cooperation of Fason. Bufiles contain no derogatory information regarding him.

ACTION:

Attached for approval is a letter to Rear Admiral Taylor, copy to San Diego, in connection with Fason's transfer.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

As I prepare for my retirement from the Federal government at the end of this month, I would like to express my appreciation to you and your staff for the many valued associations I cherish.

My career in the Federal service started with the FBI and I was fortunate enough while with the Bureau to have worked for a time in your immediate office.

Since being with the Navy, contacts and work with the Bureau in many matters have continued. These have been most rewarding. Over the years, Navy has been privileged to have such outstanding Bureau representatives as Messrs. DeLoach, Woods, Wells and Fitzgerald, to name a few of the most recent ones.

To you and the Bureau, I express my thanks for the cooperation we have enjoyed in our mutual work. And to you personally, thanks for launching me in the Federal Service.

With every good wish for your continued success, I am

Most sincerely,

On 4/29/66, Mr. Charles Richard Wilson will retire from ONI after almost 32 years of Federal service which began when he entered on duty with the Bureau as a clerk 7/5/34. He resigned 2/4/39 as Chief, Communications Section, with an entirely satisfactory record. He practiced law for a brief time and then entered the Navy in 1939 as an intelligence officer. After World War II he continued with ONI as a civilian. He has been civilian head of the investigations branch at ONI Headquarters for over ten years.

Wilson has long been the Bureau's most reliable, discreet and cooperative contact in ONI and he has been extremely helpful to us in a wide variety of situations. We have been in touch with him on a daily basis over the years and our close relationship is evidenced by the fact ONI maintains, on his desk, a telephone extension off the Bureau switchboard to facilitate contacts with him. Our relationship with Wilson has been one of the most warm and cordial of all our liaison associations. Wilson has met the Director on a number of occasions and has attended the Director's Liaison parties in the past.

Wilson often recalls with pride that he once was part of the Bureau and he has consistently been alert to the interests of the Bureau. He has told Bureau Liaison that he is retiring only because of the need to devote more of his time to raising his 14-year-old son. Wilson's wife died in 1962 leaving him with four children. The 14-year-old son is now the only one left at home.

Wilson is very well known and highly regarded among the investigative agencies at the Seat of Government. He has been a tower of strength for every Director of Naval Intelligence under whom he has served. On 9/19/58, he received the

In this regard, Admiral Taylor has asked for a copy of any official letter we may send Wilson on the occasion of his retirement.

Honorable Paul H. Nitze
Secretary of the Navy

Navy Department

Dear Mr. Nitze:

Reference is made to this Bureau's letter to you of November 9, 1965, advising that it would be necessary for your Department to reimburse this Bureau for name and fingerprint checks received in fiscal years 1966 and 1967 in excess of the funded volumes for those years. This procedure was agreed to by your agency under date of December 16, 1965,

With respect only to name checks, my letter indicated that for fiscal year 1967 a price of $1.51 each would be charged. Effective July 1, 1966, this price is being reduced to $1 each. Our experience indicates that this reduction will be possible because we find that the major part of the volume of such work covers enlistees or inductees who are relatively young and, therefore, do not have extensive backgrounds to be checked. This reduction cannot be made sooner because of the greater costs we have incurred in fiscal year 1966 in securing and training additional employees to handle the increased work.

This Bureau has been advised through liaison channels that by July 1, 1966, the Army, Navy and the Air Force will be submitting their requests for national agency checks (this covers both name and fingerprint checks) through the Department of Defense National Agency Check Processing Center, Fort Holabird, Maryland, which is to be operated by the Army. It is understood that it will not be possible for this Bureau to identify the name checks by the individual submitting defense agencies. Further, that when the total volume of name checks (fingerprint checks excluded) exceeds the total volume for which funds were provided in this Bureau's appropriation request for fiscal year 1967 (200,000 name checks were included for Navy Department), this Bureau will submit a bill to the National Agency Check Processing Center for the excess. It is also my understanding that the Center will in turn bill the individual defense departments for their share of the excess.

For your information, on the basis of present receipts, it is estimated that we will receive 340,000 name checks from your Department in fiscal year 1967 or 140,000 in excess of the number for which funds will be available. It would, therefore, appear that the cost of the excess to your Department would be $140,000 (140,000 name checks at $1 each). Information to this effect is being furnished to the Secretary of the Army with a request that he advise this Bureau if the information concerning the billing procedure for the excess volume is correct.

With respect to fingerprint checks, it is understood that these will continue to indicate the name of the submitting agencies, thus permitting this Bureau to advise the National Agency Check Processing Center on an agency basis of any excesses. A separate letter on the subject of fingerprint checks is being addressed to you.

 INFORMATION RE RETIREMENT

As the Bureau is aware, for the past several years the physical examinations for the Special Agents of this office have been made by the staff of the Great Lakes Naval Hospital. These arrangements were perfected primarily through the cooperation of Admiral KREUZ. Admiral KREUZ has been extremely cooperative with me and has done everything possible to insure that we receive excellent service at the hospital. He has always indicated extreme high regard for the Director and the FBI.

Admiral KREUZ will retire effective June 30, 1966. It is recommended that the Director forward a letter of congratulations to Admiral KREUZ on his retirement, expressing appreciation for the assistance rendered to us by the Admiral.

Admiral KREUZ was born in Menominee, Michigan, 10/10/04. He attended Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, from 1924 - 1928 and graduated with a BS degree. He studied at the Northwestern University School of Medicine, Chicago, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1930, at which time he was commissioned a Lieutenant (jg) in the Medical Corps of the U. SUBJECT: DIRECTOR OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE
MEETING WITH DIRECTOR
10:05 A.M., 5/23/66

NAVY Intelligence

The purpose of this memorandum is to advise of confirmation of the appointment set by the Director for a meeting in his office at 10:05 a.m. on 5/23/66 with Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor and Captain M. S. Rindskopf of Naval Intelligence. Also set forth is additional background on the two officers which may be helpful to the Director. As stated in enclosed memorandum Brennan to Sullivan dated 5/9/66, entitled "Request of Director of Naval Intelligence For Meeting With Director During Week Beginning 5/23/66," the sole purpose of the visit to the Director is the introduction of Captain Rindskopf who succeeds Taylor on 6/1/66 as Director of Naval Intelligence when Taylor becomes Deputy Director of Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA).

On 5/11/66, Liaison advised Lieutenant [redacted] Aide to Admiral Taylor, regarding the date and time of the appointment and he expressed appreciation for the Admiral and said the Admiral and Captain would be there at the appointed time.

b7c

Rear Admiral Rufus Lackland Taylor was born in St. Louis, Missouri, 1/6/10, and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1934. Most of his career has been spent in security and intelligence, including an assignment to the Naval Attache's office in Tokyo prior to World War II. While there, he acquired considerable fluency in the Japanese language. At the outset of World War II, he was in the Philippine Islands and escaped from Corregidor by motor boat and submarine to Australia. He had a distinguished career with the Navy in the Pacific during the remainder of the war and the initial stages of the occupation of Japan. Since 4/9/59, he has been at Naval Intelligence Headquarters. He became Director in June, 1963.

Memorandum to W. C. Sullivan
From D. J. Brennan, Jr.
RE: DIRECTOR OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE
MEETING WITH DIRECTOR
10:05 A.M., 5/23/66

Taylor has told Liaison that he had made definite plans to retire to his farm in South Carolina in June, 1966, but when he was offered the DIA post, he decided he should take it. He will assume the post and be elevated to Vice Admiral on 6/1/66. He remarked that a major factor in his decision was that he wanted to demonstrate that a career in Naval Intelligence is not a "dead end" as has been the point of view of many Naval officers. He said he also wanted to establish a precedent whereby some of his successors may move into higher positions in Defense.

Maurice Herbert Rindskopf took over as Deputy ^{DC}
Director of Naval Intelligence 9/30/66. He was born in Brooklyn, New York, 9/27/17, and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1938. He is primarily a submarine officer and is now on his second tour of intelligence duty. He has had an outstanding Navy career and, among the many decorations he has is the Navy Cross for his service in submarines during World War II. It is understood he is now under consideration for advancement to the rank of Rear Admiral. _{nd}

As set forth previously, our relations with these two officers have been most cordial and Admiral Taylor has said he is looking forward to continuing close liaison with the Bureau after he moves over to DIA. Our files contain no derogatory information on Taylor or Rindskopf.

SUBJECT: REQUEST OF DIRECTOR OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE
FOR MEETING WITH DIRECTOR DURING WEEK BEGINNING 5/23/66

D.J. Brennan

This is to recommend that, if possible, the Director accede to a request received by Liaison from Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor, Director of Naval Intelligence, for an opportunity to call on the Director. The sole purpose of the visit will be to introduce Taylor's successor, Captain Maurice Herbert Rindskopf, now Deputy Director. Liaison has been advised that Admiral Taylor and Captain Rindskopf will be extremely grateful for the privilege of seeing the Director and they will be available at any time during the week beginning 5/23/66, except the mornings of Tuesday, 5/24/66, and Thursday, 5/26/66.

Taylor, who has been at Naval Intelligence Headquarters for the past seven years and who has always been most friendly and completely cooperative with Bureau representatives, takes over as Deputy Director of Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) on 6/1/66, at which time he also will be elevated to the rank of Vice Admiral. We have no derogatory information in our files on Taylor. A letter over the Director's signature was sent to him recently after the President announced his appointment to the DIA post and his promotion in rank. Taylor called on the Director three years ago when he took over as Director of Naval Intelligence.

Captain Rindskopf is primarily a submarine officer, but is serving his second tour of duty in Naval Intelligence. He was born 9/27/17 at Brooklyn, New York, and graduated from the Naval Academy in 1938. Our files contain no derogatory information on him. He has been most cordial to Bureau Liaison.

Captain Rindskopf will be an interim Director of Naval Intelligence pending the arrival of Rear Admiral Eugene Bennett Fluckey about 7/22/66. Fluckey was designated some time ago to succeed Taylor as Director and Taylor was planning to retire in July. However, the White House appointment of Taylor to the DIA post, which Taylor must assume on 6/1/66, has made it necessary for Rindskopf to take over until the arrival of Fluckey. Rindskopf will then revert to his present post as Deputy Director.

Another memorandum will be prepared regarding the matter of addressing mail to the Director of Naval Intelligence during the period Rindskopf will be serving as Director.

RECOMMENDATION:

That, if possible, the Director accede to the request of Rear Admiral Taylor, Director of Naval Intelligence, for an opportunity to introduce his immediate successor, Captain Rindskopf, some time during the week beginning 5/23/66, excluding the mornings of Tuesday, 5/24/66, and Thursday, 5/26/66. On 5/4/66, Lieutenant [redacted] of the Navy's Foreign Military Assistance Division at the Pentagon, said that the Navy would greatly appreciate it if we could afford a Bureau tour for a Korean Navy Captain, a Brazilian Navy Commander, a Danish Lieutenant Commander, and a German Lieutenant Commander who are currently attending the U. This is to record that on 5/23/66, the Director met with Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor, Director of Naval Intelligence, and his Deputy, Maurice Herbert Rindskopf. Liaison Supervisor Joseph M. Fitzgerald accompanied the visitors into the Director's office. Captain Rindskopf succeeds Taylor on 6/1/66 when Taylor becomes Deputy Director of Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA).

During the meeting, Admiral Taylor and Captain Rindskopf commented that they have been extremely pleased with the excellent liaison between the Bureau and the Office of Naval Intelligence over the years and both assured that they are looking forward to continuing that close contact in their new posts. The Director responded by stating that he was gratified to hear such comments and that the FBI, on its part, would certainly do everything possible to maintain a most harmonious, productive relationship. Mr. Hoover remarked that he was glad to note that Admiral Taylor, by his example in spending most of his Navy career in intelligence and by his unprecedented promotion to the DIA post, was making intelligence more attractive as a career for Naval officers. Mr. Hoover emphasized that he feels military intelligence should be made attractive as a career, adding that it is most important to have continuity and experience in key posts in the intelligence community.

Mr. Hoover mentioned the increasing number of responsibilities being placed on the FBI, touching on the fact that Bureau Agents had been sent on an operational mission to the Dominican Republic some time ago and that trouble is now stirring in several other Latin American countries which might cause further demands on the Bureau.

Memorandum to W. C. Sullivan
From D. J. Brennan, Jr.
RE: DIRECTOR OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE
MEETING WITH DIRECTOR
10:05 A.M., 5/23/66

He mentioned this to illustrate the value of experience in intelligence matters pointing out that the Bureau was able to send to the Dominican Republic men who had obtained experience in intelligence in Latin America during World War II.

Mr. Hoover stressed that while excellent relations have existed over the years, it is even more important today that close cooperation between the FBI and all the military intelligence agencies continue. He also emphasized that, with the growing size of agencies, it has become absolutely necessary for their leaders to rely on inspection systems controlled by them to keep in touch with activities of their respective organizations. Mr. Hoover went on to explain the Bureau's inspection system, observing that it is most helpful to him in keeping the organization "on its toes" and combating any tendency by subordinates to "cut corners."

Following the meeting, Admiral Taylor and Captain Rindskopf remarked to the Liaison Agent that they were indeed grateful for the most interesting, informative and inspiring meeting with the Director. They were most impressed by the Director's keen, vigorous, wide-ranging comments on the world situation and on various personalities of the Washington scene. Admiral Taylor said that he has always had the highest admiration for Mr. Hoover, particularly for his integrity, and considers it a distinguished privilege to have had the opportunity to meet with him again. Captain Rindskopf said that he, too, was grateful for the fact that the Director took time from his obviously very busy schedule to greet him. Rindskopf said that he hoped to have the privilege of again seeing the Director in July, 1966, to introduce Rear Admiral Eugene Bennett Fluckey who will become Director of Naval Intelligence about 7/22/66.

Considerable effort was made by Honolulu in arranging for these photos because of jurisdictional as well as capability problems among the various military services and Government agencies which have interests in the area of the Marshall Islands.

It was through the cooperation and capability of the Navy's Pacific Missile Center, Point Mugu, Calif., that the photographs were finally obtained. It is noted that two elements of the Pacific Missile Center organization were responsible for taking and making available a number of satisfactory photos which were forwarded to New York by reairtel. The black and white photos were taken from a Navy plane commanded by Lt. Cdr. [redacted] from the Naval Pacific Missile Center, Point Mugu, Calif., on 5/2/66.

The ektachrome slides and kodacolor prints were taken from a Navy plane from Naval Airborne Project Press Operations Group (NAPOG) based at Hickam AFB, Honolulu. NAPOG is under command of Cdr. RECOMMENDATIONS OF GENERAL INVESTIGATIVE DIVISION: CTG:DC, 5/24/66

Case involves $715,000 suit filed in U. S. District Court, Southern District of New York arising out of a fire and explosion aboard the Merchant Vessel Margit in the Pacific during March, 1965, resulting in the loss of the cargo of food destined for the Far East under the Care Program. The abandoned vessel was under tow to Honolulu when it was lost in a storm and found later on by the Coast Guard near the Kwajalein Islands some 1,000 miles from the scene of the fire and explosion. Because of the remoteness, as well as the classified character of the area where the ship was found, it was not possible to conduct any type of investigation and the photographs obtained by the Navy should prove to be very valuable to the Government in its defense of this matter.

The General Investigative Division concurs with the SAC, Honolulu, and recommends that a letter of appreciation be prepared by the Crime Records Division from the Director to Admiral Raymond N. Sharp, U. S. Navy, Naval Pacific Missile Center, Point Magu, California, specifically citing the cooperation and courtesy of Commander [redacted] and Lieutenant Commander [redacted] and Bureau indices contain no information of a derogatory nature concerning the above three individuals.

Baltimore, Maryland, will become operational on May 27, 1966. This newly established agency will begin operating a centralized index to investigative files, including intelligence and criminal files, of the Army and Navy. The index to Air Force investigative files is still under preparation for inclusion in the central index and will not be available at DCII until late this summer. The investigative files of the Army are located in the U. S. Army Investigative Records Repository, Fort Holabird, as indicated in pages 13-14b, Section 9, Volume I, "Manual of Instructions." The investigative files of the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) and the Office of Special Investigations (OSI), Air Force, will remain in the Washington, D. C., area, as indicated on page 15, Section 9, Volume I, "Manual of Instructions." Leads to review Army files will continue to be handled by the Baltimore Office, and leads to review OSI files will continue to be handled by the Washington Field Office.

Effective May 27, 1966, DCII will begin furnishing the Baltimore Office index references to investigative file holdings of ONI in Washington, D. C., on all requests submitted for name checks in Bureau cases received in Baltimore for processing at Fort Holabird. This will necessitate Baltimore advising the Bureau and Washington Field accordingly so that particular file references at ONI can be reviewed by Washington Field Office. If DCII returns a "No Record," Baltimore will handle the report of same whether it results from a lead to check either Army or Navy records.

All leads to check ONI files should now be designated for Baltimore, with copies of the respective communications being designated also for Washington Field Office since that office may be subsequently requested by Baltimore to review an ONI file if DCII returns a reference to such a file.

John Edgar Hoover

O
NAVY INTELLIGENCE

MEMORANDUM FOR Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

Subj: Letter of Appreciation for Joseph M. Fitzgerald

1. I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Fitzgerald for his outstanding contributions to Naval Intelligence.
2. Since 1958, his services as Federal Bureau of Investigation Liaison Representative with the Office of Naval Intelligence have provided invaluable assistance in effecting coordination on many sensitive cases of mutual concern. Furthermore, his expeditious handling of Navy "crash" cases and programs has been most helpful. Over the years, Mr. Fitzgerald has faithfully and accurately represented the needs and policies of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at the same time developing a sympathetic understanding of the problems and requirements of Naval Intelligence. His efforts have provided a major contribution to the security of the Navy and the Nation and have enhanced the feeling of mutual confidence and esteem that has marked relations between the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Office of Naval Intelligence over many years.
3. In departing as the Director of Naval Intelligence, I would like to extend to Mr. Fitzgerald my warm personal appreciation and high professional esteem for a job well done.

NAVY DEPARTMENT May 6, 1966

Honorable Paul H. Nitze
Secretary of the Navy
Washington, D. C. 20350

Dear Mr. Nitze:

Reference is made to this Bureau's letter to you of November 9, 1965, advising that it would be necessary for your Department to reimburse this Bureau for name and fingerprint checks received in fiscal years 1966 and 1967 in excess of the funded volumes for those years. This procedure was agreed to by your Agency under date of December 16, 1965.

A change has been made by this Bureau in the price to be charged for fingerprint checks. My letter indicated a price of $1.76 for a fingerprint check. This had reference to the fingerprint checks of enlistees and inductees on which, under an agreement with your agency, we make a name search only in our fingerprint records and do not conduct a complete technical fingerprint search. We now find that not only are the prints received on enlistees and inductees in excess of funded volumes, but the fingerprints on which we make a complete technical fingerprint search, i. e., those received from the Office of Naval Intelligence, are in excess of funded volumes. It will, therefore, be necessary to request reimbursement from your agency for such excess at the rate of $2.18 for each fingerprint check. However, with respect to the enlistee or inductee prints (on which we conduct a name search only of our fingerprint records), the charge for the excess over the funded volumes has been reduced from $1.76 to $1.30. This change in price is being made effective retroactive to October 10, 1965, (effective date of last pay raise).

In fiscal year 1966 through the month of March 1966, we received a total of 215,034 enlistee or inductee fingerprints, or 35,034 in excess of the 180,000 for which funds are available in our 1966 appropriation.

Honorable Paul H. Nitze

This will require reimbursement in an amount of $45,544.20 (35,034 prints at $1.30 each). If the present rate of receipt continues through the remainder of fiscal year 1966, it is estimated we will receive a total of 287,034 enlistee or inductee fingerprints. This would be 107,034 in excess of the 180,000 for which funds are available and would require a total reimbursement of $139,144.20 (107,034 fingerprints at $1.30).

With respect to fingerprints received from the Office of Naval Intelligence on which a technical search is conducted, funds were provided in our 1966 fiscal year appropriation to cover 180,000 such fingerprint checks. Through the month of March 1966, we received a total of 137,682 such fingerprints. This is not in excess of the 180,000 for which funds are available. If the present rate of receipt continues through the end of fiscal year 1966, we would receive a total of 183,582 such fingerprints. This would be 3,582 in excess of the funded volume of 180,000 and would require reimbursement of $7,808.76 (3,582 fingerprints at $2.18 each).

Through the month of March 1966, a reimbursement of $45,544.20 will be required covering an excess of 35,034 enlistee or inductee prints at $1.30 each. A voucher in this amount will be submitted separately to your agency for appropriate action.

It is understood that by July 1, 1966, practically all fingerprint checks of defense department agencies will be forwarded to this Bureau through the Department of Defense National Agency Check Processing Center, Fort Holabird, Maryland, which is to be operated by the Army. It is also understood that while this Bureau will be able to determine the submitting agency, it will be necessary for us to treat these agencies as one and bill the National Agency Check Processing Center for the total excess. It is understood the Center will reimburse this Bureau and collect from the individual agencies. For your information and use in this connection there is set forth below information it is felt you will need for purposes of making the necessary funding arrangements in fiscal year 1967.

Funds are included in our 1967 appropriation request to cover 405,000 fingerprint checks from the Navy Department (205,000 enlistees or inductees -- name search and 200,000 from Office of Naval Intelligence -- technical search). On the basis of present volumes of receipts projected through fiscal year 1967, it is estimated we will receive a total of 471,600 fingerprint checks from your Department (288,000 enlistees or inductees and 183,600 from Office of Naval Intelligence).

In summary, for fiscal year 1967 the total estimated fingerprints to be received from your Department will exceed the number for which funds have been requested and will require reimbursement as follows: enlistees or inductees (name searched only) -- 83,000 fingerprints at $1.30 each for a total of $107,900; other fingerprints (technical searches required) -- 16,400 under the 200,000 for which funds will be available, or a credit of $35,752 (16,400 at $2.18 each) to be applied against the $107,900 estimated due for the excess on enlistee and inductee prints, leaving an estimated net amount to be reimbursed to this Bureau of $72,148. It is estimated that if receipts in fiscal year 1967 continue at the present rate the total funded volumes for all agencies will be exceeded about January 1, 1967, and this Bureau would start billing the Center at the end of the first month showing an excess volume.

Similar information is being furnished the other defense agencies.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

SUBJECT: TRANSFER OF REAR ADMIRAL ISAAC C. KIDD, JR., OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS

This is to advise that Admiral Kidd, who has been Executive Assistant and Senior Aide to the Chief of Naval Operations for the past four years, was detached from that post on 6/15/66 and will go to Naples, Italy, about 7/26/66 to take up new duties as Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics and Administration, Allied Forces, Southern Europe. Until then, he will be on leave, but still in touch with the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations.

Admiral Kidd has been extremely cooperative with Bureau Liaison in arranging very valuable assistance by the Navy. Examples are the providing of Navy personnel to assist in terrain searches of the swamp areas in Mississippi civil rights cases, providing underwater search personnel and equipment and aerial photography assistance in Mississippi on the same type of case. He also utilized high-level Navy officials in the Dominican Republic in locating for us the daughter of a Mexican police contact. His most recent assistance to us was arranging for a representative of the [redacted] to receive extended motion picture training by the Navy. This has, of course, enhanced our relations with [redacted]

Kidd is very highly regarded within the Navy and is exceptionally well informed by virtue of his position under the Chief of Naval Operations. He was awarded the Legion of Merit on 6/14/66 for his outstanding and meritorious performance and for his abilities in handling political and military assistance at the highest level. This is to recommend that, if possible, the Director accede to a request from Captain M. H. Rindskopf for an opportunity to call on the Director. The purpose of the visit will be to introduce the new Director of Naval Intelligence, Rear Admiral Eugene Bennett Fluckey. Liaison has been advised that Admiral Fluckey and Captain Rindskopf will be extremely grateful for the privilege of seeing the Director, and they will be available at any time during Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, 7/25, 26 or 27/66.

On 5/23/66, the Director saw Captain Rindskopf, then Deputy Director of Naval Intelligence, and Rear Admiral Rufus L. Taylor, then Director of Naval Intelligence. This was in connection with Taylor's promotion to Vice Admiral and Deputy Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency and the succession of Taylor by Rindskopf as Director of Naval Intelligence, effective 6/1/66. In conjunction with that meeting, Captain Rindskopf told Liaison that he hoped to have the privilege of again seeing the Director in July, 1966, to introduce Admiral Fluckey, who will become Director of Naval Intelligence on 7/22/66. Rindskopf will then revert to his former position as Deputy Director.

Admiral Fluckey, who was born in Washington, D. C., 10/5/13, graduated from the Naval Academy in 1935, and has been a Rear Admiral since July, 1961. He has had a standing record and is one of the most decorated Naval officers in the service. Among his decorations is the Congressional Medal of Honor awarded him during World War II for a submarine attack he conducted against Japanese vessels. He also won the Navy Cross four times for his submarine exploits in World War II. Admiral Fluckey has no intelligence background and is coming to his new post from the position of Commander of Submarines in the Pacific.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation
U. S. Department of Justice
Washington, D. C. 20535

Dear Mr. Hoover:

It has been the custom at this Activity for several years to invite our retired employees to the Naval Air Station for a reunion. This is one way of expressing appreciation to them for their years of loyal and faithful service to the Federal Government and this Activity. We call this "Old-Timers' Day" and attempt to plan the program in a manner to ensure that it is truly their day.

The highlight of the program, which is received with enthusiasm by the retirees, is the prominent public officials who attend to honor them. It is indeed a pleasure to extend to you a cordial invitation to be our honored guest and featured speaker for this occasion on Friday, 12 August 1966. We are mindful of your very busy schedule, however, we would be most grateful if you would accept this invitation; you may feel free to speak on any subject you desire. I am sure your choice will be timely and worthwhile to approximately 900 retirees, Congressional, State, City and Naval dignitaries and over 10,000 Station personnel who will hear your remarks over the public address system. Also, it is planned to have the address carried on live radio.

The program usually begins at approximately 0800 with a welcoming ceremony, after which the honored guests and speakers are presented. The program is flexible however and can be adjusted to a time convenient to you. The opening ceremonies are then followed by a tour for all retirees to their former shops and offices to renew acquaintances with their friends. A luncheon is served about twelve o'clock followed by an afternoon of entertainment by people of national and local prominence.

Every effort is made to make this day a memorable occasion. Your presence would surely make this effort a reality. Sometimes problems are encountered in making travel accommodations to fit schedules.

SUBJECT: COMMENDATION LETTERS FROM
COLONEL ROBERT F. WHEELER
ARMED FORCES POLICE
WASHINGTON NAVY YARD, WASHINGTON, D.C.
REGARDING TRAINING SCHOOL BY
AGENTS OF WASHINGTON FIELD OFFICE

NAVY DEPARTMENT

Under date of 7-1-66 Colonel Robert F. Wheeler, Commander, Headquarters Armed Forces Police, Washington Navy Yard, wrote the Director to express thanks and gratitude for the assistance and cooperation rendered to the Armed Forces Police of Washington, D. C., during their recent session of the Armed Forces Police Academy. He was very complimentary in his remarks concerning the instructors. Actually, Colonel Wheeler sent seven letters all dated 7-1-66 and all identical except that each letter named a different Washington Field Office Agent. The Director saw the letter concerning Special Agent Harold F. Charron, Jr., and directed that a memorandum be sent to the Attorney General.

The Agents named by Colonel Wheeler in addition to Special Agent Charron were Special Agents Calvin R. Ford, Sidney H. Roche, [redacted] and [redacted]

It is felt that one memorandum to the Attorney General advising of the several letters should suffice and that the SAC, Washington Field Office, be advised of the comments of Colonel Wheeler and be furnished copies of his letter for the information of the Agents named.

Bufiles reflect Colonel Wheeler has been a valuable liaison contact and most cooperative, and we have had a very close relationship with him. We have had prior cordial correspondence with him.

The purpose of this memorandum is to recommend the inclusion of Captain Edward Garris Rifenburgh, in the above meeting previously set by the Director. As previously approved by the Director, Captain M. S. Rindskopf, present Director of Naval Intelligence, and Admiral Eugene Bennett Fluckey, incoming Director of Naval Intelligence, are to meet with the Director in his office for the purpose of introduction of Admiral Fluckey to the Director.

On 7/8/66, word was received by Liaison from Captain Rindskopf that it would be greatly appreciated if the Director would be agreeable to Captain Rifenburgh, Acting Deputy Director of Naval Intelligence, coming along with the other two officers to meet the Director.

Captain Rifenburgh has been at Naval Intelligence Headquarters during several different periods and has been very friendly and cooperative with representatives of the Bureau. He was born 12/29/15, has been in the Navy since 1937, and has been a Captain since 1960. After serving at Naval Intelligence Headquarters for several years in the Division of Policy and Plans and in the Foreign Liaison Office, Captain Rifenburgh went to Paris, France, in July, 1960, and served for several years as Naval Attache. He then returned to the Pentagon as Assistant Director of Naval Intelligence for Foreign Intelligence. He became Acting Deputy Director of Naval Intelligence 6/1/66. About 8/1/66, he will become Director, Naval Investigative Service. This is a subsidiary of the Office of Naval Intelligence which encompasses the counterintelligence and investigative activities and is the area of Naval intelligence with which the Bureau has most of its contact.

I cannot thank you enough for your very thoughtful letter of June 17th wherein you commented on the very close association which I have been privileged to enjoy during four years as Executive Assistant to the Chief of Naval Operations.

Among the most rewarding and warmest connections have been those with your distinguished organization through a very close friend of mine, Mr. Joe Fitzgerald. They don't come any finer than Mr. Fitzgerald and his prompt and thorough handling of your business coordinating with the Navy where we were able to be of service has been a wonderful series of opportunities for me to watch real professionals at work.

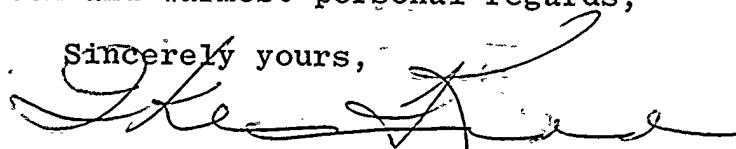

If, at any time in the future, I may be of further service to you and the Bureau wherever I may be serving, please do not hesitate to call upon me as it will be a great honor to assist.

The purpose of this memorandum is to advise of confirmation of the appointment set by the Director for a meeting in his Office at 10:15 a.m. on 7/25/66 with Rear Admiral Eugene Bennett Fluckey and Captain M. S. Rindskopf of Naval Intelligence. Also set forth is additional background on Fluckey which may be helpful to the Director. The Director previously met Captain Rindskopf on 5/23/66. Rindskopf has been serving as Director of Naval Intelligence since 6/1/66, and will revert to his former position as Deputy Director when Admiral Fluckey takes over as Director of Naval Intelligence on 7/22/66. The purpose of this visit is to introduce Admiral Fluckey to the Director.

On 6/29/66, Liaison advised Lieutenant Charles Theisen, Aide to the Director of Naval Intelligence, regarding the date and time of the appointment. He expressed appreciation on behalf of the Admiral and the Captain and said that they would be there at the appointed time.

Born in Washington, D. C., educated in public schools here and a graduate of the Naval Academy in 1931, Admiral Fluckey has been in the Navy continuously since that time. He has been a Rear Admiral since July, 1961. Since 1938, he has been principally in the submarine service of the Navy and his latest post has been as Commander, Submarine Force, Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Fluckey is one of the most decorated officers in the Navy. During World War II, he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Navy Cross (four times) for his spectacular exploits against the Japanese. These are set forth in detail in the enclosed Navy biographical summary.

Memorandum Brennan to Sullivan
Re: Director of Naval Intelligence
Meeting with Director
10:15 a.m., 7/25/66

After the close of World War II, Fluckey worked under Navy Secretary James Forrestal on plans for unification of the Armed Services. Later in 1945, he became Personal Aide to Fleet Admiral Nimitz, Chief of Naval Operations. While Fluckey has had no previous service in Naval Intelligence, he served as Naval Attache to Portugal, 1950-53.

Fluckey holds the Expert Pistol Shot Medal. In 1949, in an effort to combat communist infiltration of American youth, he became an Eagle Scout. He and his wife have one daughter. Their usual residence is at San Diego, California.

As pointed out in my previous memorandum, we have no derogatory information on Fluckey. He has been described as a fervent admirer of the Director and the Bureau. We had cordial correspondence with him in 1955 when he wrote in appreciation of assistance to him by our Legal Attache's Office in Mexico when his ship visited that country.

ACTION:

For information. Special Agent Joseph M. Fitzgerald of the Liaison Section will escort Admiral Fluckey and Captain Rindskopf to the meeting with the Director.

for This is to record that on 7/25/66, the Director met with Rear Admiral E. B. Fluckey, new Director of Naval Intelligence, his Deputy, Captain M. H. Rindskopf, and Captain E. G. Rifenburgh, new Director of Naval Investigative Service, Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI). Liaison Supervisor Joseph M. Fitzgerald accompanied the visitors into the Director's office. b.c.

During the meeting, Admiral Fluckey said that he realized excellent liaison has long existed between ONI and the Bureau and he indicated he was most anxious to insure that it continues while he is head of ONI. The Director stated he appreciated this attitude of cooperation and remarked that he considers that the Bureau's relations with ONI and the other military intelligence services are "superb." One evidence of this, Mr. Hoover added, is the fact that most problems are resolved on the working level. He assured Admiral Fluckey that the Bureau would do everything possible to maintain the best of relations with the Navy. W

Admiral Fluckey said he had long been a great admirer of the Director and was extremely pleased to have the opportunity to meet and talk with him. He mentioned that he had never taken a tour of the Bureau Headquarters and the Director invited him to take a special tour with any persons he would like to bring along whenever it is convenient for him to do so. Admiral Fluckey later told the Bureau Liaison representative he would be in touch with Liaison in a few weeks about a tour and would like to bring his wife along. Stapleton

A number of topics were touched on during the conversation in the Director's office. The Director stressed public relations value of Bureau tours by letting the public know everything possible about the Bureau's work. He pointed out that conducting tours has long been good training for Bureau 7/28/66 employees who later become Special Agents. Mr. Hoover also spoke of the expanding responsibilities of the Bureau resulting from the passage of new laws. Considerable discussion took place regarding the Bureau's activities against the Cosa Nostra.

Admiral Fluckey asked for the Director's comments on the present racial situation and the role of the communists in it. The Director said he believes that laws must be enforced impartially regardless of the color of persons violating them, and that it is wrong to be continually yielding to demands of minority groups for special consideration. He deplored the actions of some public figures who make irresponsible statements which might encourage violence. Mr. Hoover pointed out that in the beginning, racial demonstrations were organized for the most part by Negroes themselves, although the communists were always quick to take advantage of the situation. More and more, the communist influence is being noted at the outset of these demonstrations. He mentioned the W.E.B. DuBois Clubs as one of the main vehicles for communist influence among the Negroes.

After the meeting, Admiral Fluckey and the other officers told the Liaison Agent that they were most grateful for the extremely informative and stimulating meeting with the Director. They indicated that they were highly impressed by the Director's keen grasp of a wide variety of topics. Admiral Fluckey described the Director as "a terrifically interesting man." He also invited the Bureau Liaison representative to maintain close contact with his office which, of course, will be done.

Color photographs taken at the conclusion of the meeting are being handled separately by the Crime Records Division.

This is to advise that on 7/12/66, Lieutenant Commander [redacted] of the Navy's Foreign Military Assistance Division at the Pentagon, said that Navy would greatly appreciate a Bureau tour for 25 foreign Naval officers now undergoing flight training at Pensacola, Florida. The matter has been discussed with the Correspondence and Tours Section, Crime Records Division, and a tour has been arranged for Wednesday, 7/27/66, from 10:15 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Commander Hiebner has been so advised.

According to Commander [redacted] the foreign Naval officers consist of 15 air cadets from South Vietnam, eight officers from the Argentine and two from Thailand. He said these officers are all in the grades of ensigns and lieutenants. They will be escorted by two U. S. Naval officers, one of whom has not yet been selected. The one already selected is Lieutenant Commander [redacted] said that all of the visiting Naval officers have a working knowledge of the English language. However, it would be well for the Bureau personnel conducting the tour to speak somewhat slowly.

As with other similar groups, these people are to listen to a lecture on civil rights and racial matters given by [redacted] of Justice in Room 1101, Justice Building, prior to the Bureau tour. Arrangements have been made to pick up the group at that room to take them on the tour.

Mr. J. Edgar HOOVER, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

Dear Mr. HOOVER:

It is my particular pleasure to express appreciation for the contribution of Special Agent Lish WHITSON to the conference held earlier this month for counterintelligence analysts from field units of the Naval Investigative Service. The undivided consensus of the attending analysts and my staff members indicates the conference was a marked success and I can assure you this was in no small measure due to the effectiveness of Mr. WHITSON's presentation on the functions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The recent restructuring of the Naval Investigative Service, encompassing as it does the counterintelligence mission and functions of the Office of Naval Intelligence, affords timely opportunity for increased emphasis on our counterintelligence support to the Naval establishment and to the intelligence community. It is with this in mind that I consider Mr. WHITSON's discussion of the counterintelligence interests of the Federal Bureau of Investigation most interesting and valuable to the conference participants.

I hope you will convey my thanks to Mr. WHITSON for this fine support.

This is to recommend approval of a request of MSTS to again send Bureau representatives to speak on Bureau jurisdiction and on communism before a group of Naval Reserve officers who will convene for training at Washington, D. C., on 8/15/66.

On 7/27/66, Lieutenant [redacted] of MSTS told Liaison that it would be greatly appreciated if Bureau representatives could again be sent to lecture to the above group at MSTS Headquarters. Since initial approval by the Director in July, 1960, we have been assisting the Navy by providing such lectures about four times yearly. As a result of a discussion with the Internal Security Section and the Training Division, it is contemplated that SA [redacted] will give the talk on communism and SA Richard E. Kohler will give the talk on Bureau jurisdiction.

Lieutenant [redacted] said he would like to schedule the lecture on communism from 9:30 to 11:15 a.m. and the lecture on Bureau jurisdiction from 12:45 to 2:30 p.m., both on 8/15/66. The talks are to be given at 3800 Newark Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and the Bureau representatives are requested to report, prior to the lecture, at Room 1018 in that building. Lieutenant [redacted] has assured that all persons in attendance at these lectures will have clearance for "Secret" information.

This is to recommend that a special tour of Bureau Headquarters and a briefing, if possible by a ranking official of the Bureau, be afforded to a group of high-ranking foreign Naval officers being brought to this country for 10 months training by the U. S. Navy.

On 7/28/66, Lieutenant [redacted] of the Navy's Foreign Military Assistance Division at the Pentagon, related that 21 foreign Naval officers, Commanders and Captains, from 21 different countries in the Free World, will begin a Naval Command Course of 10 months duration at the Naval War College, Newport, Rhode Island, in September, 1966. Navy has been conducting such programs for the past 10 years, and during the training, efforts are made to give the visitors the best possible impression of the U. S. and its Government.

A trip to Washington, D. C., is being arranged for 9/23/66. The group's schedule includes a special tour of the White House, including a briefing by [redacted] a visit to State and a briefing by a high-ranking official, and a luncheon at the Capitol where several Senators and Congressmen will explain the functions of Congress. Lieutenant [redacted] said that Navy has been so pleased with the results of tours the Bureau has been giving recently to other visiting groups of foreign Naval officers that it decided to include the Bureau tour for this group also.

Lieutenant [redacted] said that the Navy is allotting 2:15 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. on 9/23/66 for the Bureau visit and he added that it was hoped that the Director or some other ranking official of the Bureau could brief the group for about 20 to 25 minutes on the role of the FBI in the U. RE: NAVY REQUEST FOR BUREAU TOUR AND
BRIEFING 2:15 - 4:15 p.m., 9/23/66

Lieutenant [] pointed out that most of the officers who have received this training in the past have risen to higher positions in their respective countries. Lieutenant [] said that the group is to be escorted by eight U. S. Naval officers, headed by a Captain. All the visitors are said to have a very good working knowledge of the English language. b6 b7C

Tentative arrangements have been made whereby Classroom 5240 will be available for briefing the group following which two Agents will take the officers on a very special tour of Bureau Headquarters.

OBSERVATIONS:

It is not believed necessary that the Director take the time to meet with this group. However, particularly in view of the possibility that some of the foreign officers will be from countries where our Legal Attaches are stationed or visit, it is felt Assistant Director Sullivan or a member of the staff of the Domestic Intelligence Division should brief them, as requested by the Navy.

RECOMMENDATION:

(1) That a very special tour of Bureau Headquarters be provided this group of visiting foreign Naval officers. On approval, Liaison will advise Navy.

(2) That Navy also be advised by Liaison that Assistant Director Sullivan or a member of the staff of his Division will meet with and brief the visiting officers in Room 5240 prior to the tour.

This is to recommend a letter to the Director, Defense Intelligence Agency, commending Captain Lacy upon his reassignment as Commanding Officer, Naval Investigative Service Office, New York, New York.

Captain Lacy's transfer is effective September 2, 1966. He is being replaced by Colonel Gordon Flaherty, with whom the Bureau has had continuing liaison while assigned to the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence, Army.

Captain Lacy has been a valuable liaison contact and is a great admirer of the Director and the Bureau. We have had cordial correspondence with him for a number of years. The Director last wrote him on March 14, 1966, to thank him for an autographed photograph of General William C. Westmoreland, which Captain Lacy brought back from Vietnam following a briefing of Westmoreland by Captain Lacy concerning Vietnam demonstrations in the United States. A substantial amount of the material for this briefing was furnished Captain Lacy by the Bureau, for which he was most appreciative.

It seems appropriate to direct a letter to Lieutenant General Joseph F. Carroll, Director, Defense Intelligence Agency, commending Captain Lacy.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I am Commanding Officer of a Naval Reserve Fleet Division located in Detroit, Michigan. A portion of our training of Naval Reservists is devoted to a leadership program. One of the objectives of this program is to inform our men of the dangers of communism; provide them with a broader knowledge of the many ways communists are at work in this country, and reinforce the principles of our society.

In the past I have found that personal contact with an authority in a specific field has been a very effective and inspiring way to conduct our leadership program. It would be greatly appreciated if an agent or representative of the Federal Bureau of Investigation could speak on the general topic "Communism In The United States" at one of our weekend Naval Reserve meetings. Our future training schedule is as follows:

September 17-18
October 15-16
November 5-6
December 3-4

January 21-22
February 18-19
March 18-19

Thank you in advance for your consideration.

Very respectfully,

My dear Mr. Hoover:

As Director of Naval Investigative Service, Office of Naval Intelligence, I wish to express my sincere appreciation to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the splendid assistance and support rendered our Agents' Training Unit during the past school year.

I especially wish to commend the professional performance of your designated representatives, Special Agent Thomas J. Brownfield, Special Agent Richard E. Kohler, and Dr. Fred M. Miller, who have so competently and effectively participated in our ONI agent training program. Repeatedly called upon to instruct agent trainees in specialized investigative techniques and FBI laboratory facilities, these Special Agents delivered presentations in a most enlightening and proficient manner, attesting to the total professional performance that most typifies your splendid organization.

Messrs. Brownfield, Kohler, and Miller have contributed meaningfully and measurably to our Agent training program by instructing ONI Agent trainees in investigative procedures, developing their skills, and enhancing their career potential. The excellent and praiseworthy expertise of these gentlemen and the splendid liaison rapport they have constantly manifested and developed throughout this past school year, merit my sincere and hearty "Well Done."

This is to furnish additional information concerning a special tour of Bureau Headquarters and a briefing scheduled to be given by Assistant Director Sullivan, as previously approved by the Director, on 9/23/66 to a group of foreign Naval officers being trained at the Naval War College.

Due to other demands on Class Room 5240 where the briefing is to be given, arrangements have been made to give the briefing following the tour rather than preceding it as originally scheduled. Accordingly, the group will report to Room 1732 and take the tour first and will then be brought to Class Room 5240 at 3:30 p.m. for the briefing by Mr. Sullivan. This change has been coordinated with all persons concerned, including Lieutenant [redacted] of the Navy who is in charge of arrangements for the visitors. b6 b7C

This is to advise that, following the Director's approval of recommendation in enclosed memorandum of 10/24/66, entitled, "Navy Request for Tour of Bureau Facilities at Quantico November, 1966," a tour of those facilities was afforded on 11/3/66 to Captains E. G. Rifenburgh, Thomas L. Stevens, Jr., and Gilbert S. Blake of the Office of Naval Intelligence Headquarters.

The three Naval officers were accompanied to Quantico by SA J. M. Fitzgerald of the Liaison Section. SAC Sloan took them on a tour of the Academy Building and gave them a detailed account of the growth of the Bureau's training program and facilities at Quantico and the plans for future expansion. Later, SA George Zeiss took the officers on a tour of the ranges and described the various activities carried on there. The officers spent a total of about four hours at Quantico.

All three Captains were outspokenly and most favorably impressed with the Quantico training staff, physical plant and equipment. They also commented favorably to Liaison regarding the well-disciplined, businesslike atmosphere there. All were extremely grateful for the opportunity to visit the place. Captain Rifenburgh said that he believes Admiral E. B. Fluckey, Director of Naval Intelligence, would like a similar tour at some time in the future. However, he indicated that Admiral Fluckey would probably not make a specific request until sometime next spring.

This is to recommend approval for a tour of the Bureau's facilities at Quantico, Virginia, by three high-ranking, cooperative officials of the Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI) Headquarters.

During a recent visit by Liaison to the Naval Investigative Service (NIS) Headquarters of ONI, Captain Thomas L. Stevens, Jr., Deputy Director of the NIS and a graduate of the National Academy, 34th Session, 1947, said that he and his immediate superior, Captain E. G. Rifenburgh, Director of NIS, and Captain Gilbert S. Blake, head of the Administrative and Support Department of NIS, would greatly appreciate an opportunity to visit the FBI's facilities at Quantico sometime in the near future. Captain Stevens, of course, received Bureau training there. He said he would like to visit the place again and also to have his associates see something of the FBI's operations there as he believes they will be very favorably impressed.

Bufiles contain no adverse information on Captain Rifenburgh, who visited the Director with several other top ONI officials in July, 1966, and who treasures an autographed color photograph taken with the Director at that time. Likewise, our files reveal no adverse information on Captain Stevens, who was a Deputy Sheriff of Alameda County, California, at the time he attended the National Academy, but who has been on active duty with the Navy for many years. Our file on Stevens reflects that he has been most cooperative and friendly with the Bureau wherever he has been assigned (1-4133). Captain Blake was a Special Agent applicant in 1951, but consideration was discontinued after receipt of an unverified allegation that Blake was having an affair with a married woman and that both couples involved were contemplating divorce. Otherwise our investigation of him was generally favorable. Two of Blake's uncles were once Special Agents of the Bureau. Blake served as a Naval Aviator in World War II and won several decorations, including the distinguished Flying Cross (67-486618).

OBSERVATIONS:

It is noted that a large amount of the Bureau's liaison work with the Navy is through the area of ONI supervised by these three officers. We have frequent contact with Captains Rifenburg and Stevens, who assumed their posts during the past summer. Both have been extremely cooperative, as has been Captain Blake, although there has been little occasion for official dealings with him.

In recent years, visits to Quantico have been limited to those specifically approved by the Director. This is a situation in which it is strongly felt such approval should be granted. It will do much to foster our continued fine relations with the Navy.

SAC Sloan has been consulted and he advised the requested visit could be handled by him and his staff in early November, 1966.

RECOMMENDATION:

That approval be granted to afford a tour of the Quantico facilities of the Bureau to the three officers mentioned above with details as to the date and time of the tour to be coordinated by Liaison.

The purpose of this memorandum is to recommend that an SAC Letter be sent advising the field of the consolidation of the Office of Special Investigations (OSI), Air Force, index into the Defense Central Index of Investigations (DCII), Fort Holabird, Maryland.

Memorandum Brennan to Sullivan, 5/24/66, advised that the newly established DCII would become operational 5/27/66 and would contain a centralized index of investigative files of the Army and Navy. It was specifically noted that the integration of the OSI index was being delayed due to problems encountered in the preparation of necessary index cards. SAC Letter #66-32, dated 5/26/66, advising of the creation and operation of the DCII was approved and sent to the field.

By attached letter, Baltimore advises that effective 11/1/66, the OSI index will be consolidated into the centralized index of DCII. This will have the following effect:

OSI files will continue to be located in Washington, D. C., but the index to the files will be located at Fort Holabird. Effective 11/1/66, all leads to check Air Force (OSI) files should be designated for Baltimore by the Bureau and field offices, with copies of the respective communications being designated also for the Washington Field Office since that Office may be subsequently requested by Baltimore

Dear Sir:

I wish to bring to your attention the very excellent cooperation we have received the past two years from Special Agent H. Robert Hoy.

Mr. Hoy has given very unselfishly of his time and energy handling matters of mutual concern between your Honolulu office and Navy authorities here at Pearl Harbor. He has been most beneficial in assisting to train recruits for the Naval Base Police Department, U. S. Naval Station, Pearl Harbor.

Mr. Hoy's leaving this area on another assignment is a great loss to those of us who have worked with him. He is certainly one of your more outstanding representatives.

This recommends we permit Naval Intelligence Service to participate in briefings and debriefings of Navy Department personnel being utilized by us in controlled operations against foreign intelligence services.

BACKGROUND:

By letter dated 12/9/66 Captain E. G. Rifenburgh, Director, Naval Investigative Service, pointed out the benefits which have derived to his service from cooperation between it and the FBI in our program of controlled military walk-ins to Soviet-bloc establishments. The Navy has assisted us in the selection of suitable candidates, in providing feed material which has withstood the scrutiny of the opposition and excited their further interests and has participated in all briefings and debriefings of Naval military personnel used as walk-ins.

NOT RECORDED

Captain Rifenburgh expressed his appreciation for the cooperation, advice and guidance which had been afforded by named Special Agents of the New York and Washington Field Offices. He said that the program had afforded Navy representatives an opportunity to obtain much-needed practical experience in this sensitive field which has enhanced the ability of his service to meet its overseas counterintelligence responsibilities. He noted that presently active controlled operations overseas will be coordinated with the FBI when the Navy personnel involved are returned to the United States.

He added that as a result of the experience gained by the Navy through this program, all active controlled operations have been placed under the cognizance of a Special Operations Section in his service which is responsible for world-wide monitoring of operations in which the Navy has a vested interest and a need-to-know. This insures that appropriate senior officials are aware of specific operations, which is a continuing consideration in view of frequent personnel changes which occur in the military. It will also insure that the sensitivity of the duties of controlled sources do not subsequently increase to a point where their continued use could be detrimental to security.

Captain Rifenburgh requested our concurrence in having a representative of the Special Operations Section participate in the briefings and debriefings of Navy Department personnel, both military and civilian, being utilized by this Bureau in controlled operations. He specifically pointed out that direction and control of these operations will remain with this Bureau.

OBSERVATIONS:

Our experience of cooperation with the military service in the program of controlled military walk-ins has been excellent. The cooperation of the military in these cases, including the Navy, has been complete; has not interfered with the orderly control and direction of each operation by the Bureau; and has resulted in the elimination of much investigative and research time on the part of participating Bureau personnel. It has also demonstrated that suitable information for passage by our double agents has been more easily obtained with the cooperative participation of the particular service involved. Since we will not yield control and direction of the operations and since the presence of Naval personnel at briefings and debriefings of controlled sources not only assists them in handling their legitimate interests, but also facilitates the handling of our operational problems, Navy's request should be granted. We will make it perfectly clear that their participation in briefings and debriefings must in no way interfere with our complete direction and control of the double agent and each specific operation.

RECOMMENDATION:

Attached is a letter to the Director of the Naval Investigative Service agreeing to participation of Naval Investigative Service personnel in briefings and debriefings of Navy Department personnel being utilized by the FBI in controlled operations against foreign intelligence services.

Gentlemen:

In connection with the military training program in effect here at the Naval Training Center Supply Office, Great Lakes, Illinois, I intend to present a lecture, or series of lectures, on "American Democracy and Hostile Forces." It is my opinion that the current situation in Southeast Asia has received the preponderance of attention in recent years. Common sense cautions that the threat from within is, at worst, tantamount to external aggression, whether active or passive. Consequently, I have selected to develop my presentation on, "The Enemy Within," i.e., the Communist Party, U.S.A.

In my research efforts I have obtained a limited amount of historical data from your Chicago office on some activities of CPUSA during the period 1962 through 1964.

In order to present the most complete and current picture of CPUSA from its organization and inception to the present time, I require much additional information, leaflets, pamphlets, and publications. I would appreciate any literature and/or publications that could be provided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington. In addition, any film(s) on CPUSA would be most helpful.

Sincerely,

Dear

This is to inform you that I want you to act as a Subcontractor or Consultant to perform advisory, writing, and drawing tasks for me on certain Classified material. Please be available to perform the work at various times between the present date and December 31, 1967.

This Classified work will all be CONFIDENTIAL, related to a U. S. Navy Contract No. N00600-67-C-054, and two U. S. Navy Purchase Orders No. NL66-0712-67 and NL66-0765-67, which have recently been awarded to me.

The work will consist of five motion picture Treatments and five motion picture Scripts, named Actuation and Damage, Acoustic, Magnetic, Pressure, and Combination. These are all part of a Series numbered MN-10385 A-E. The one on which I am mainly interested in having you work is Magnetic, MN-10385-C. However, I may require your services on the other four scripts as well.

At present the procedures we will follow appear to be as will be listed hereafter. However, since this Subcontract and Consultant work you will perform may extend over a full year, experience may lead to modifications. In any case, the procedures will at all times be in the interest of expediting the project, guarding the security of all material, and acting within the guidelines of security as laid down in the Industrial Security Manual, with which you are familiar.

The following are the procedures you and I will follow:

1. I will mail to you research material, notes, rough Treatments or rough Scripts, with instructions as to what you are to do for me.
2. I may require you to make one or more research trips to Washington, D. C. or Charleston, S. Carolina.
3. You will study the material I make available to you and write such documents as I request. In some cases you may be able to report to me verbally.
4. In the case of Consulting advice, I will expect you to evaluate my own work and write either a revision or a list of suggestions. Or, this may be accomplished during a conference between you and me.
5. In the case of Subcontract work I will expect you to write a Treatment, a Script, or both. I may also require you to make all or some of the Storyboard drawings for the Script.

ENCLOSURE

6. Whatever work you do on this project will be based on as much research material and as much personal information as I can furnish to you.
7. Any work you do will be handled by you as strictly CONFIDENTIAL in nature. You will mark all of your work CONFIDENTIAL. You will mail your work to me marked CONFIDENTIAL and sealed in the proper wrappers.
8. While working on this project, you will store all classified material properly and according to the provisions of the Industrial Security Manual.
9. You will dispose of any waste material according to the Industrial Security Manual, and your facility's Standard Practices Procedure as approved by your cognizant Security office.

In reply to my inquiry of 21 Nov 1966, the DCASR office in Boston sent me a certification that you are fully qualified to do the work I ask of you.

I will phone or write you when I am ready for you to do any work on this project, so you and I can discuss a possible work and delivery schedule.

I look forward to cooperating with you in the production of a good job. However, please understand that the above specifications and procedures do not in any way commit me to use your services as a Subcontractor or Consultant in case the progress of the work in question indicates that such services are not needed.

Honorable J. Edgar Hoover

Dear Mr. Hoover:

On 19 December 1966 my Staff Legal Office conducted a law seminar here at Roosevelt Roads. The seminar was conducted primarily for the benefit of officers in command and other interested senior officers within the Naval Station complex. Mr. Thomas J. O'Toole, Special Agent from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who is presently attached to the San Juan office, was a guest speaker. His topic was in the constitutional rights area and included a discussion of the recent Miranda decision.

It was apparent from the very favorable comments that I have heard subsequent to the seminar, that Mr. O'Toole's presentation was interesting, enlightening and enthusiastically received.

The cooperation of Mr. Clark D. Anderson from your office in San Juan in making him available was very much appreciated and assisted my staff in making the law seminar an unqualified success. May I take this opportunity to notify you of his participation and to thank Mr. Anderson and Mr. O'Toole for their contribution to our law seminar.
